Alton Jones Campus to be Used Research, Education Facility

Special committees have been appointed to study possibilities for developing URI's W. Alton Jones campus in West Greenwich. The campus will explore research possibilities while the other will study educational and recreational uses, it was announced.

Horn said the two committees were named to draw suggestions for development of an overall campus utilization from a representative group as possible.

James W. Cobble of the college of agriculture has been appointed chairman of the research and development study committee. Members of this committee include P. Gould, associate professor of forestry; Dr. Robert Lepore, chairman of the URI botany department; Dr. Saul B. Salla, professor of oceanography; Dr. Donald J. Zinn, chairman of the URI zoology department; and Dr. Cronin, supervisor of fish management in the State department of agriculture and conservation.

Edward McGuire, assistant to the director, was named chairman of the educational and recreational development study group. He will be assisted by Boris C. Bell, URI director of student activities; John J. Buckett, director of instruction and special services in the extension division; Miss M. Massey, chairman of the department of physical education; Thomas E. Mori, chairman of the URI education department; Dr. Eugene C.

Winslow, professor of chemistry; John L. Rego, associate director of the Cooperative Extension Service; and Augustine W. Riccio, director of the State department of social welfare.

The two study groups will report to the Jones Campus planning committee, headed by Edwin F. Hallenback, URI director of institutional research. Also on the committee are Dean Cobble, Mr. McGuire and Norman G. McCullough, URI assistant business manager.

The planning unit will handle all specialized studies and the development of an overall master plan for the new West Greenwich campus, Dr. Horn said.

Military Ball On March 30

This year's URI Military Ball will be the biggest and best, according to coordinator Gary Kullberg. The annual affair will be held Saturday, March 30 from 8:30 to 12 p.m. in Keaney Gym.

The whole theme for the ball, conducted by the URI ROTC department, will be radically different. The gymnasium will take on the characteristic of a model officers' club, complete with a Japanese garden and two "bars."

Mr. Kullberg said the lobby of Keaney Gym will be decorated to simulate the interior of an officers' club.

T. Kearns Heads IFC in '63-'64; SAE Fined for Rule Infraction

by James Clingham

Tom Kearns

Thomas Kearns, a Junior majoring in biology was elected president of the IFC at its meeting Monday night. Other officers elected are Michael DiFanti, vice-president; William Northrup, secretary, and Allan Saabye, treasurer.

Kearns served as a representative to the National Interfraternity Council this past year. He is chairman of this year's Greek Week activities. A 1959 graduate of St. Raphael Academy in Pawtucket, Kearns is a member of Phi Mu Delta fraternity and the URI track team.

DeFanti, a junior majoring in math, is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and a 1960 graduate of Westerly High School. Northrup is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha and the Class of 1964. Saabye also a junior, is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

In other business to come before the Council Monday night, Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity was fined $100 on two charges of drinking in the chapter house.

On the nights of Feb. 22 and 23 campus police entered SAE and found drinking or evidence of drinking. Complaints of possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages were filed against SAE by the Office of the Dean of Men.

The executive council of the IFC suggested the $100 fine after reviewing the facts of the case at a Council meeting last week. The recommendation was made, according to President Tony Masso, on the basis of the present position of SAE, charter probation resulting from IFC action last spring. The vote on the recommendation was 8 to 7 in favor.

Speaking in defense of SAE Vice-President-elect DeFanti questioned how the actions of three members of the fraternity can be considered action by the whole fraternity. He questioned how the fraternity can control members bringing one or two "beers" back from "down the line". He also pointed out that it was a holiday weekend, Washington's Birthday, and that the house was practically empty. It was also pointed out that members of other fraternities were present the night of the incidents.

Mr. Kearns countered that it was

Student Senate Passes Constitution; Will Become Effective October 1

The URI Student Senate unanimously passed its first constitutional revision in its history Monday night. The new constitution, which becomes law next Oct. 1, calls for a reappointment of the student government body, popular election of senators and officers, and stricter requirements for service eligibility.

The constitution, submitted to the Senate three weeks ago by a planning committee headed by Senator Albert Szymanski, was approved with little debate. Discussion of the document had been carried on at special weekly sessions since its presentation.

Under its provisions, the constitution requires immediate reappointment of the 106-member Senate to a group of no more than 36 representatives.

Thirty senators will be elected by the student body at general elections in October. Nominating papers must be presented to the Senate executive committee before a candidate's eligibility is approved.

Choral Festival to be Presented This Sunday at Keaney Gym

The second Intercollegiate Choral Festival for Rhode Island will be held next Sunday at 4 p. m. in the URI's Keaney Gym and the public is invited, admission free.

The participating conductors and their schools are: Ward Abusamra, URI; Eric Kunzel, Brown University; Richard Alberg, Bryant College; Father Leo Cannon, Providence College; Gertrude McGunigle, Rhode Island College; Sister Mary Rosina and C. Alexander Pelouquin, Salve Regina College.

The feature work of the program will be the "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure sung to the accompaniment of organ, piano and harp.

The remainder of the program will feature the 275-voice choir singing the following: "Alleluia" by Randall Thompson, "O For a Shout of Sacred Joy" by Alan Hovhaness, "Hallelujah Chorus" (Mount of Olives) by Beethoven, and "Festival Song of Praise" by Mendelssohn.

Winifred P. Elliot, a member of the URI Chorus who has studied the harp for ten years, will be the harpist for the feature work. Other URI students performing will be Marcia Iacobucci, pianist, and Dick Cipolla, organist.

University Production Opens Thursday O'Neill's Play Is New England Centered

"Desire Under the Elms" by Eugene O'Neill will be presented by the University Theatre under the direction of Robert Will tomorrow through Sunday in Quinn Hall Auditorium.

Curtain time for the play is 8:30 p. m. and tickets may be purchased at the Quinn Hall box office any time during this week. Admission is $1.25 for adults and .50 cents for students.

This play should be of special interest to New Englanders, since O'Neill grew up in this region and employs the New England elements in his setting and characters.

The story centers around a 70 year old man who marries a young, sensual woman, thereby forcing two of his sons to decide to leave home. The youngest son chooses to remain on the farm, however, and gains a feeling that it belongs to him. This creates a fast moving plot complete with the traditional New England family conflict.

Tom Hardie will play the father, Pam Paine, the mother, and Clay Dennis, Burton Weiser, and Mike Thaler, the three sons.

WAA Elections Scheduled For Tomorrow

The URI Women's Athletic Association will hold its annual elections tomorrow in Butterfield and Hope dining halls from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Candidates and their offices include: Nancy McDowell and Donna Moses, president; Karen Beaton, Sandra Hazen and Diane Rancourt, vice president; and Poanne Connor, Barbara Duran and Sharon Eddy, secretary-treasurer.

HERE'S OUR GLAMOUR GIRL—Miss Susan Maynard, a junior majoring in Home Economics has been chosen by the Beacon editor to represent URI in the Glamour magazine contest for best dressed girls in American colleges. MARKING ON THE CURVE—AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

Twokey Crimscott was a professor. Choate Sigafos was a sophomore. Twokey Crimscott was keen, cold, brilliant. Choate Sigafos was loose, vague, adenoidal. Twokey Crimscott believed in diligence, discipline, and marking on the curve. Choate Sigafos believed in elves, Julie London, and thirteen hours of sleep each night.

Yet there came a time when Twokey Crimscott—mentor, sage, and savant—was thoroughly outthought, outfoxed, outmaneuvered, outplayed, and outwitted by Choate Sigafos, sophomore.

It happened one day when Choate was at the library studying for one of Mr. Crimscott's exams in sociology. Mr. Crimscott's exams were murder—plain, flat murder. They consisted of one hundred questions, each question having four possible answers—A, B, C, and D. You had to check the correct answer, but the trouble was that the four choices were so subtly shaded, so intricately worded, that students more clever by far than Choate Sigafos were often set to gibbering.

So on this day Choate sat in the library poring over his sociology text, his tiny brow furrowed with concentration, while all around him sat the other members of the sociology class, every one studying like crazy, every one scared and pasty. Choate looked sadly at their stricken faces. "What a waste!" he thought. "All this youth, this verve, this bounce, chained to dusty books in a dusty library! We should be out singing and dancing and cutting dices on the greensward! Instead we are here."

Then, suddenly, an absolute gasser of an idea hit Choate. "Listen!" he shouted to his classmates. "Tomorrow when we take the exam, let's all—every one of us—check Choice 'A' on every question—every one of them."

"Hub?" said his classmates.
"Oh, I know that Choice 'A' can't be the right answer to every question," said Choate. "But what's the difference? Mr. Crimscott marks on the curve. If we all check the same answer, then we all get the same score, and everybody in the class gets a 'C'."

"Hm," said his classmates.
"So why should we knock ourselves out studying?" said Choate. "Let's get out of here and have a ball!"

So they all ran out and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and had a ball, as indeed, you will too when you light a Marlboro, for it there ever was a cigarette to lift the spirit and gladden the heart, to dispel the shades of night, to knot up the ravelled sleeve of care, to put spring in your gait and cross in your cheeks, it is filtered Marlboro—firm and pure and fragrant and filled with rich, natural, golden tobacco. And, what's more, the durable smoke comes in soft packs that are actually soft and flip-top boxes that actually flip.

Well sir, the next morning the whole class did what Choate said, and, sure enough, they all got C's, and they picked Choate up and carried him on their shoulders and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and pined him with sweetmeats and Marlboro's and girls and put on buttons which said "I DOTE ON CHOATE."

But they were celebrating too soon. Because the next hour showed old Mr. Crimscott gave them a test, he did not give them one hundred multiple choice questions. He only gave them one question—to wit: write a 30,000 word essay on "Crime Does Not Pay."

"You and your ideas," they said to Choate and tore off his epaulet and broke his sword and drummed him out of the school. Today, a broken man, he earns a living as a cannibal in Toledo.

At the top of the curve of smoking pleasure, you'll find Marlboro Cigarettes, available at every tobacco counter in all fifty States of the Union.

The Gate Keeper is Wrong

What must a newspaper do to sell? Some newspapers find it necessary to print smut; others are able to gain sales by excellent news coverage; and still others are able to gain circulation solely due to lack of prominent competition.

When a newspaper reaches a point where it has eliminated competition then it acts as the sole form of printed communications and therefore can act as a gatekeeper for the dissemination of information. The gatekeeper theory suggests that the person who decides what will be told to the public and the prominence this information will be given in the media will be solely dependent on his views and philosophies in regard to a given subject.

The responsibility of such a publication to be unbiased, fair and equal to all parties is one of moral judgment. A gatekeeper in this situation has a duty to all parties to equally publicize their accomplishments and faults.

The Providence Journal Company in their two publications, The Providence Journal and The Evening Bulletin have used their gatekeeper right to focus much unfavorable attention on the University in the past few months.

We cannot argue that the Bugs Bunny cartoon has a distinct connection with the Playboy Bunny, and that the URI administration should be chided for allowing such relaxation during examination time. But we can argue that the Providence College and Brown University administrations should be offered similar distasteful comments.

We cannot argue that URI students occasionally get into hot water. In every college where there is an assembly of young men, there will be occasional infractions of the law. These infractions should be considered in the same regard as the infractions of any other group. We cannot believe that our neighboring institutions of higher learning have in their student bodies 'paragons of virtue' who never cross the thin line. If bad publicity is to be thrown upon colleges, then all should receive their bad publicity—in equal space and with the same prominence.

Why does the Providence Journal constantly play up URI's faults; give back page coverage to their accomplishments; give back page coverage to the wrongdoings of other universities in Rhode Island and prominent coverage to their accomplishments?

Why? This is what we think. Our neighboring institutions are private in nature, therefore, according to their gatekeeper should not receive adverse publicity—lest it hurt their fund-raising drives. URI is public in nature and therefore any criticism hurled against it can only injure its public image which, in the last analysis is 'unimportant' because it only depends on the public to maintain it.

The other universities are located in the hub of metropolitan Rhode Island and therefore any accomplishments they incur are of local interest while the accomplishments of URI at Kingston are not of the same news value.

Realistically, we cannot accept this thinking. We realize that it is the duty of a newspaper to guard the public interest in public matters, but it would also seem that this duty lies in the realm of exact public matters and not in the 'scandal' and misbehaviors of individuals or individual groups.

We also realize that this editorial will do nothing to change the views of the 'gatekeeper' at the Journal Company but we as students of the University of Rhode Island would like it to be known that we are cognizant of the gatekeeper and that we dislike his practices.

Maturity is Coming

The Interfraternity Council showed some maturity last Monday evening when it levied the stiffest fine in its history on a fraternity for violating the University regulation in regard to drinking.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, presently on charter probation, was fined $100 for minor incidents which occurred in their fraternity last month.

We feel that the members present are beginning to realize the function of its body as a self-regulatory group and are cognizant of the "fraternity image" and the role that they have in preserving this image.

Good Job, Tony

Tony Masso left office as president of the Interfraternity Council last Monday evening. He has served the Interfraternity Council and the University well and we would like to publicly congratulate him.

The job of a president of such a powerful group can be difficult especially when cooperation is lacking. Tony thanked his comrades for their cooperation but it was evident all year that most of the work done by the IFC was the hard work of Masso and his executive committee.

This has been a year of great accomplishment, and although there are tremendous strides to still be taken, Tony has been instrumental in raising IFC thinking to a more mature level.

It takes great courage for a leader to admit that his group is lax and to seek the help of administrative officers to eliminate this fault. Tony has done this, and as a result a good program of fraternity evaluation, other than the President's Committee, has been instituted. Good job, Tony—you have served URI well.

Fail-Safe

Two novels have been published in recent months discussing the variables open to any President of the United States in the event of a guided missile being accidentally fired at the Soviet Union. Both authors have reached the conclusion that the only out would be to get on the hot line to 'K' and offer to destroy an American city as to save the world from an all-out nuclear war and possibly total destruction. The author of Fail-Safe has suggested that New York City would be the logical offering, but evidently the author of Two Hours to Doom feels that Atlantic City (during the busy season, I would imagine) would be a fair swap for Moscow.

No Chest Necessary

The campus chest drive will be getting into full swing shortly, and the queen of this year's Blue Key Campus Chest Bazaar will be called Miss Campus Queen. As you recall—in past years—the title was slightly more risque! But then—we are becoming a modest New England institution.

Monsoon season again

Spring and mud. Mud and spring. URI and spring. URI in mud. The March rains traditionally make this campus muddy. The URI student traditionally marches through the mud. Traditionally a couple of URI students are lost in the mud. Which only goes to prove that the grass, excuse me, mud wasn't meant to be walked on—I guess.

Swimming in March

The skindivers group here is going to go swimming in the Atlantic Ocean next weekend. They say that it will be an exercise to learn how to handle the cold water. They don't expect there will be any ice because salt water doesn't freeze until 26 degrees and the water will be a Bermudery thirty-five.

Switching season

Many of the senior leaders will be giving their farewell addresses in the next few weeks. Their groups will be taken over by the juniors who have been itching and scratching for this chance since last year. It will be interesting to see how elections go in the various organizations and it will also be interesting—one year from now—to observe the big switch and to note the indispensable feeling that senior leaders have.

Here we go boot to boot

President Horn and Dean Quinn will again shine shoes this year at the Blue Key Bazaar. They charge only 50 cents per pair. Possibly a finer team of bootblacks has never been assembled anywhere! They travel under the name of Frankie and Johnny. Have you ever thought that you would like either of these men to shine your shoes? —50 cents please.

BACK STAGE

OPENING NIGHT! Tomorrow night! Desire Under the Elms. Eugene O'Neill's powerful drama will be presented on the University Theatre stage at Quinn. Curtain at 8:30 in the evening. The play will run for four nights.

Backstage there is now more electricity than just that which the power plant supplies. Palms perspire, and breathing is shallow for the actors who wait out the last few tense hours before the lights flood the stage, and the farm of Ephraim Cabot comes alive in the minds of actors and audience.

The farm of Desire Under the Elms should have more meaning for URI audiences than for those in other parts of the country. It is the kind of land we see here on the hard hills of Kingston. Rock-strewn, frost-heaved, and hard to till, these farms bloom only after almost back-breaking and sometimes heart-breaking work. We see the manifestations of abandoned farms in the many stone walls we stumble across in the woods of this area. Just a few miles eastward on Route 138 there is an deserted, once-proud farmhouse that could very well have been the setting for just such a story as Desire Under the Elms.

The "lay of the land" is known to us, and we don't have to bring our imaginations too far from the familiar to visualize the real setting of the play.

Eugene O'Neill grew up not too far from here: Provincetown. His images and symbols of Yankee life are not alien to most active New Englanders. In some of the characters he presents we may see parallels in our own neighbors. The epithets for them may be: "hard-headed", "obstinate", "tenacious", "plodding." We may praise them by calling them "durable", "hard-working", "dedicated." Some of O'Neill's people presented on the stage may very well be reflections of some of the people sitting in the audience.

Reflections of O'Neill himself may also be seated in the audience. He was a rebellious student at college. There is the story that he was dismissed from Princeton University because he threw a bottle through the window of the office of the University president, a man who later became the President of the United States—Woodrow Wilson.

O'Neill was also a rebel amongst the playwrights. He fought out against plays that were "preachy" and pragmatic. He rejected the idea of using the stage for a pulpit, and he wrote plays that spoke out with dramatic impact. The message is there, but not in the form of a sermon.

Ephraim Cabot will be played by Tom Hardie. His young sensual wife Abbie Putnam will be played by Pam Paine. Cabot's sons will be played by Clay Dennis, Burton Weiser, and Mike Thaler. Others in the cast are: Jeff Archer, Diane Armitage, Bettina Brightman, Jill Fine, Harvey Golberg, Dana Hanes, Cynthia Jordan, and Dave Stevenson.

by Peter A. Shocket

Since the newly-formed literary society, Paradigm, presented its first edition to the university last week, there has been a rash of criticisms and plaudits from both students and faculty. In an attempt to winnow out some over-all critique of the new magazine I spoke directly with members connected with Paradigm, students and faculty members. As they say on television, "Herein lies their story."

Faculty and graduate students, while not overwhelming in their praise, nevertheless felt that the magazine had made a significant advance over previous publications of this nature. The fundamental make-up change from the glossiness of Oracle and Scroll to a simpler, neater magazine, catering to a higher degree of selectivity, would help keep the standards high.

In general the poetry was thought of better than the prose, although there were mixed feelings concerning the former. It would be unfair, at this juncture, to label those who fared better than the rest, but suffice it to say that while some of the poetry proved good reading and worthwhile, the bulk was not taken very seriously.

There was really no general undergraduate consensus: opinions traveled the spectrum. On the negative side, there were such notable quotes as it's "too far out," and "it's too esoteric." One vituperative young lady stated simply that it was the "work of all those pseudo-intellectuals who hang around the Coffee Break." Of this group, or batch if you like, on further questioning there was not a one who made specific denigrations of the magazine.

Of the undergraduate students who liked and enjoyed Paradigm their responses were a bit more sensible. The praise for the poetry and prose was about equal, with some bringing up the proverbial phrase, "We don't understand it." But generally, all agreed they would like to see more writings of on prose. The backbone of any literary organization is, of course, its contributors. I spoke with Mr. Harrington, the editor, as to actual quantitative response for this past issue and the one to be published in the spring. In any magazine of this nature there is always a preponderance of poetry, and due to limitations an imbalance of poetry over prose can easily occur. Once again, the format almost precluded this of happening. Mr. Harrington stated that he had already received over 75 poems for the new issue. This turnout is necessary if Paradigm is to continue to grow in stature and excellence.

Sex and Marriage Discussed at Talk

Does birth control figure in modern marriages? Yes, according to Mrs. Gloria Spears, a caseworker for the South County area, and guest speaker for the first of three lectures entitled "Marriage and Sex," sponsored by the URI Christian Association.

The facts behind her position on this subject are poor physical or mental health of the mother, or an economic situation that might lead to the deterioration of the marriage.

Mrs. Spears began her lecture by saying that sexual promiscuity has its origins in the personal values gained from the environment surrounding the individual.

Discussing interfaith marriages, Mrs. Spears says that they can work, but that a special breed of tolerant people are necessary for the great adaption that will have to take place.

Tomorrow night the Christian Association will present the second of lectures. William A. Reid, M.D., an obstetrician and gynecologist, will speak on "Physicians Look at Marriage and Sex."

club. The refreshment stands will be real bars, without the liquor.

The gymnasium floor will take on the air of an oriental garden, complete with a suspended pagoda and arbors covered with roses. Music will be provided by Tommy Masso's String Orchestra.

The traditional events of past military balls will be seen again this year, from the election of a new Coed Colonel to a drill exhibition by members of the Pershing Rifles drill team.

All freshmen, sophomores, and members of the ROTC advanced course will be required to wear their uniforms to the ball, although they will wear white shirts and black bow ties under them. All juniors and seniors not enrolled in ROTC will wear semi-formal attire.

Tickets for the dance can be obtained from any member of Seaboard and Blade, the honor society of ROTC members, or at the Union desk.

Besides Mr. Kullberg, other members of the ball committee include: Dick Jordan, advertising; Dick Santos, physical arrangements; Steve French, tickets and programs; George Gray, reception line; John Cookingham, refreshments; Ed Levine, queen candidates; Stu Tuttle, patrons; and Tom Godfray, decorations.

Opportunities at DuPont for technical graduates—fifth of a series

PRODUCT DIVERSIFICATION=OPPORTUNITY

DuPont manufactures and sells more than 1200 different products and product lines. Such diversification offers tremendous opportunities to technical men.

For example, DuPont's sales force is made up predominantly of engineers and chemists. One important reason for this is that 95% of all our sales are to manufacturers who process our products further or use them in their own operations. It's up to our sales force to see that our products live up to our advertising claims in each end product.

Suppose you were selling our versatile DELRIN® acetal resin. It's a plastic with good tensile strength and creep resistance under a wide range of temperature and humidity conditions.

You might be helping to solve the problems of a gear pump manufacturer one day, an automotive parts builder the next, and an electric razor manufacturer another time.

Diversity of applications for most of our products is the main reason why each of DuPont's 12 sales divisions has its own lab. They back up our salesmen and are available to them for trouble-shooting work of their own.

A career in sales at DuPont requires technical know-how, persistence and dedication. It also requires a searching, inventive mind: one that can envision new markets for our products as well as follow through on sales and quality control within our customers' organizations.

If you are a technical man with a feeling for sales and a desire to apply your technical knowledge creatively almost every day—mail our coupon. You'll receive information about employment opportunities at DuPont, and, if you like, about DELRIN and other new DuPont products featured in our "Opportunities" series.

VIEWPOINT

by STEPHEN B. ROSENBERG

President—Student Senate

After several weeks of heated debate, proposed amendments, stylistic changes, and sundry other "niceties" of parliamentary procedure, the Student Senate by unanimous vote adopted the new Senate Constitution.

It is felt that the new constitution, by providing an equitable basis of representation, an all-campus election increased, more clearly defined responsibility of officers, provide the springboard for a vastly improved system of student government.

At the heart of the new constitution is the belief that there are at least thirty people on this campus who not only have opinions on subjects of import but are willing to express those opinions publicly. While I recognize the propensity in most organizations for a clique or even one individual to completely dominate the situation, I submit this phenomenon is not particularly healthy and can become overcome. A clique or individual usually is able to come to a position of dominance only when the vast majority is unable or unwilling to carry out collective responsibility. By cutting down Senate membership from an unwieldy 106 members to a manageable group of elected representatives, it is hoped that these 30 people will be able to carry out the responsibility that their predecessors often shirked.

Along with the accomplishment of a new constitution, is the present administration's hope, as has been previously expressed, to institute further reforms before its term of office concluded. At our next meeting, comprehensive reports are due from the Elections Committee which, under the capable guidance of Mr. Vallesse, has been studying the archaic election procedures. Also due out of committee is the revision of the constitution of the Student Activities Tax Committee. The committee headed by Miss Chandler is expected to put forth comprehensive remedies to the presently confused tax system.

The next Senate meeting will see the nomination of officers for the 1963-1964 term. At its meeting of April 1st, the Student Senate will proceed to choose its future officers from among those nominated. Since the elections will be held under the terms of the old constitution, I urge all senators to attend the next meetings and to select their future leaders with utmost care.

'Right to Know' Defended by Justice Powers

Justice William E. Powers of the Rhode Island Supreme Court said that the "right to know" is vital to the workings of democracy in a press interview by the URI journalism students last Thursday.

Justice Powers conceded that there were some instances relating to personalities that should not be made into public meetings and that the big issue was the "right to know what?"

In line with this, he said that there were many previous instances where TV and newsreel cameras could have been safely permitted into a courtroom but that he definitely would not favor a "free license" in all cases for this media coverage. Justice Powers remarked that a picture of an grieving defendant served no purpose but to increase the circulation of a newspaper.

When asked whether the jury system represented a weak spot in the judicial structure, he emphatically said that it did not and that criticism of jury trials were outstanding exceptions. However, he indicated that the present system of requiring a unanimous vote may be unnecessary, and a consensus of agreement among ten or 11 of the jurors might be sufficient.

Justice Powers also said that the present judicial system in Rhode Island could not be improved, in his opinion, but that certain individuals might be responsible for any shortcomings. He said that the only way to improve the administration of justice was "for each of us, as individuals to strive for excellence."

When one questioner mentioned the sympathetic treatment which young criminals receive in the courts, Justice Powers remarked that 964 out of every 1000 young people to whom deferred sentences are given do not get into serious trouble again.

He also questioned the rights of the newspaper to pass judgment on carrying the names of these youthful offenders and said that the people should decide this question. The right of the people to make their own laws was a recurring theme of Justice Powers throughout the interview.

When asked his opinion on assistant attorney general offices in each section of the state, he expressed the belief that a special attorney could be sent to clear up important business but that he would not favor a permanent establishment of these assistant offices in the towns. Justice Powers further mentioned that the newspapers carry only the criminal activities of the Attorney General's office when there was considerable other news just as important but not as eye-catching.

On the question of the divergence of laws from state to state, he remarked, "If you don't like the law, elect legislators who will bring it in line. The courts can't do it."

Yeats Discussed By Yale Prof.

"Yeats the poet was rarely as absurd as Yeats the man," asserted Dr. Harold Bloom at the Paradigm Coffee Hour last Friday. Dr. Bloom, professor of English at Yale University, spoke on "Yeats and Romanticism."

Dr. Bloom emphasized that Yeats wrote better than he knew. He stated that critics should overlook Yeats' "flirtation with Fascism" and his leaning towards spiritualists.

He also attacked modern critics who won't admit that Yeats was a romanticist. Dr. Bloom classified Yeats as a true romantic. He went on to show the great influence of Shelley and Blake, two romantic poets, on Yeats' poetry.

He pointed out that Yeats regarded Shelley's poem, "Prometheus Unbound," as a "sacred book." He read passages in Yeats similar to Shelley's writings and quoted from Yeats' own essays on Shelley and Blake.

Dr. Bloom concluded that, through the influence of the earlier romantic poets and his own experiences, Yeats became a great romantic and a great poet, who sought for and found "unity of being" through his imaginative poetry.

campus policy that no liquor is allowed on campus and that it is the duty of the IFC to enforce this law. His stand was that whether one member or the whole house was caught, does not matter. The house should be prosecuted for the actions of each and every member in matters of this type. Chief Burns pointed out the position of the campus police in regard to the fraternities and said the police "are not here to spy", but are merely trying to enforce campus law.

The IFC made plans for the annual Greek Week activities to be held the week of April 21. Tentative plans call for the traditional Olympic Games, Fraternity Sing and a concert featuring Pete Seeger, national known folksinger.

In a statement made to the Beacon, President elect Kearns listed three areas in which he hopes to make improvements: "At the present time there are three very important items on my mind—First is a committee on personal property tax, a problem which has been plaguing fraternities at URI for many years; secondly is the establishment of renewed interest on the part of the fraternities in Co-op buying; and third, a re-evaluation of the IFC Constitution and By-Laws." Mr. Kearns also said that he hopes to create "a greater interfraternity relationship with the administration."

High School Model Congress Held Here Last Saturday

Delegations from 25 Rhode Island secondary schools attended the annual High School Model Congress at URI Saturday.

In the Senate, Mount St. Charles Academy sponsored a resolution "That the United States should promote a common market for the Western Hemisphere."

Another Senate bill, sponsored by Our Lady of Providence Seminary, stated that "Whereas both the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations risk serious economic loss at the hands of the European Community, be it resolved that the United States negotiate a free trade agreement with the British Commonwealth."

South Kingstown High School presented the third Senate bill, "That the United States attempt to promote a system of low tariff trade in food and consumer goods with the Communist satellite nations of eastern Europe, with the understanding that the people of these nations be informed of the source of the goods."

Cranston East High School presented a House bill, "That an import license should be imposed on those companies having parts of their finished product made in foreign countries."

A second House bill, sponsored by Woonsocket High School, provided "That all non-communist nations initiate trade embargo act against Communist nations, thus promoting trade within the free world community."

The third bill in the House, sponsored by St. Mary's Academy of the Visitation, stated that "In order to compete with the European Common Market, the United States should join forces with the English Commonwealth in an economic union."

Other schools sending delegations were Burrillville, Coventry, Mount Pleasant, North Kingstown, North Providence, Pawtucket West, Pongansett, Sacred Heart, Rogers and Warwick High Schools.

Also, DeLaSalle, LaSalle, Sacred Heart, Saint Catherine, Saint Jean Baptiste, Saint Mary's Academy, Bayview, and Portsmouth Priory, Providence Country Day School and Saint Andrew's School.

LORIN HOLLANDER, internationally known pianist will perform at the next URI Music Series concert on Tuesday, March 19 at 8:15 p. m. in Edwards Hall. Speaking Our Mind

by HARVEY GOODMAN & BILL PARRILLO

The Beacon Sports' Staff receives many letters; some very serious in content and others that seem to mock various subjects or those that just wish to be annoying. We received one such mock letter Monday that read as follows:

"Dear Sir: Looks like University of Connecticut got rooked at Rhode Island, but the better team won the Conference. They may lose to Syracuse, Colgate and West Virginia but I think Connecticut is a better team for the tournament. The activity at R. I. was bush league. First the officiating was bad. Nightingale made six fouls in all, one given to someone else by mistake. He should not have been allowed to play with six fouls. Then Connecticut actually won the game by one point but the clock was allowed to run an extra 43 seconds. Mistakes like this are bush league. I would not say they are intentional but one wonders."

We at the Beacon firmly believe that the sport of basketball is played as a team sport with all the objectivity and judgment on the part of the officials that is standard in athletics. Officials are hired to "call them as they see them" and they officiate from the floor and not from the stands.

From one bushman to another, we would like to reiterate the fact that both schools are members of the Yankee Conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Association. This seems to bring out the plain, simple fact that both schools use NCAA officials hired to carry out their job with as much fairness and ability as they know how.

I'm sure that no one else thought that the clock at Keaney Gym was allowed to run an extra 43 seconds so perhaps the author of this letter was the person in charge of running the electric clock since he seems to be the only person who believes this.

Perhaps our bushy friend would like to come to the URI-UConn game next year and sit at the scoring table to check on the number of fouls that Frank Nightingale will receive. Or better yet, we suggest that he apply to the NCAA for a job to audit the number of fouls that every major college basketball player receives during the basketball season.

Or better still, we have one more piece of advice for the author of the letter—transfer to Miami!

Here's a little food for thought for those post-season basketball fans who delight in seeing who made what all-star team. Rhode Island's Steve Chubin was named to the first All-New England squad and deservedly so.

Then what happens—the All-East selections come out and the Ram big scorer doesn't even rate an honorable mention yet he was determined at one end as one of the five best in the New England states.

Baseball is around the corner and the Rams have a new coach Bob Butler who comes highly recommended. The Rams are working out at Keaney now and maybe the crowds will get larger. The New York Mets they ain't.

In case anyone didn't know, there was a wrestling team at Rhody this year. They really pulled off a spectacular win in their last match needing and getting the last four bouts on pins and winning 20-16. The grunt 'n groan sport is definitely in at Rhode Island and there is even a rumor to the effect that Killer Kowalski has applied for admission.

Back to basketball—a couple of funny things happened on the way to the game—

On the way to the Main fieldhouse one snowy Saturday eve the Rams carrying their basketball togs went to play the Maine Black Bears in the University library! It seems that with all the snow and all, the fieldhouse couldn't be found until someone spotted some bright lights ahead. "There's the gym." So the Greyhound bus rolled up to the "Gym" and the driver went inside to find out where to go. All he found were a lot of books and some people who don't like basketball.

At present there are two instances which are running neck and neck for top honors under the category of "The Most Courageous Act of the Year." No. 1—Ron Rothstein calling an official over so he could dry his hands on the guy's shirt before taking a foul shot. No. 2—Charlie Lee, 6-3, 185 squaring off against Miami's Mike McCoy, 7-1, 240. I wonder what would have happened if Joe Louis had fought Willie Pep?

Rhody Rams Facts & Figs.

by Bill Parrillo

For the figure filberts of URI basketball the following is hoped to be a long-awaited reward for their patience.

The roundball year of 1962-63 saw a few records broken and the emergence of a sophomore Steve Chubin who could conceivably be Rhody's all-time scoring champ.

The statistics of a basketball season have a way of giving a different outlook on a season which to most ended with the men of Ernie Calverley compiling a 14-11 slate, his best since the 18-9 mark of three years ago.

Let's look a little closer at this past season and see what it tells us both in individual accomplishment and team play.

In the record breaking department, the Rams set a new team scoring record on a total of 2064 points and an average of 79.4 points per game. Previous high was the 2023 scored by the 1955-56 aggregation.

The Rams also set a Keaney Gym scoring mark when they ran up a total of 121 points against the New Hampshire Wildcats.

Many people have said that Calverley undertook the most ambitious schedule in the history of the University of Rhode Island. This can find support upon checking the mythical national ratings of some of the Rams past opponents.

At one time or another they took the court against five nationally ranked teams—who were or are named in the top-ten listings. Running down the schedule there can be seen Arizona State, (4th ranked), Miami (Fla.), St. Joseph's, Holy Cross, and neighboring Providence.

Going one step further in this obsession with "name" teams, the Rhode Islanders have met seven teams that are now participating in the two major post-season tournaments, the above five plus the Fordham Rams and the UConn Huskies.

In the small college post-season tourney are the Northeastern Huskies. The Rams dealt them one of their two defeats during the regular season.

So it seems the Rams had a good sampling of the big teams in the nation and in most cases acquitted themselves admirably.

As far opposition personnel is concerned, the Rams have played against some of the top men in the country in ability and height.

Eight have been mentioned as honorable mention All-Americans.

The list is quite impressive with the following names: Joe Caldwell and Art Becker, Arizona State; Jim Lynam, St. Joe's; Rick Barry, Miami; Jim Barry, Georgetown; Vin Ernst, Providence; Bob Melvin, Fordham.

Point spreads play a huge role in the retelling of the URI court fortunes of the past season as Rhody pulled a great number of late game

Twitchell Cops Scoring Lead Chubin Second, 21.5 Average

Rodger Twitchell, who capped a fine season by scoring 33 points against Maine, is the 1962-63 Yankee Conference scoring champion, according to final statistics released today by the Conference publicity office.

Twitchell, an all-Conference selection a year ago, posted a total of 226 points in 10 games for an average of 22.6 points per contest. In compiling his total, he shot an amazing 53 per cent from the field.

Jim Rich of the University of New Hampshire finished second in total points with 197 while Steve Chubin of URI, who led the race most of the season, had the second best average of 21.5. The latter, playing the last part of the season with a badly bruised right elbow, missed one game completely because of the injury and although tremendously valuable to the Rams in keeping them in the race until the final game, had his marksmanship tail off.

Bob Logan, Rhode Island's side court bomber, took fourth place with 181 points and Ed Slomcenski of the champions from Connecticut was fifth with 171 points.

In other views, Joe Caldwell, the limber leaper from Arizona State, was named the outstanding player to face the URI Rams during the past season in the selection of an all-opponent basketball team by the Ram letter winners.

In addition to Caldwell, others selected for the first team are Ray Flynn of Providence, Toby Kimball of Connecticut, Rick Barry of Miami, and Jim Christy of Georgetown.

The second team comprises John rallies only to find the victory door closed at the finish.

The examples of this are endless. Against Miami and their tall towers, the Rams rallied in the second half to take a brief lead and then fell back finally losing 88-80. With Manhattan the Rams came from far behind to come within three points of the opposition on two occasions except to fall back 88-82.

The largest margin the Calverley-men were behind at the half was 17 points against Holy Cross. The largest losing margin was 18 points against Providence. The most points scored against the Rams in a half was 55 by the same Manhattan Jaspers.

The largest halftime lead for the Rams was 22 against the UNH Wildcats and the UNH-URI contest also saw the largest Ram margin of victory after the shooting was over—29 points.

The Rams seem to have played their best against the prestige clubs notably Arizona State, St. Joseph's, Miami, Providence (the first game) and Fordham.

So, while numbers can't win games for the Rams, they sure can give a clearer insight on what happened and who played the major roles.

Thompson and Vin Ernst of Providence, Jim Lynam of St. Joseph's, Rodger Twitchell of Massachusetts, and Jim Rich of New Hampshire. Honorable mention went to Tom Wynne of St. Joseph's, Clarence Hill of Massachusetts, Scotti Ward of South Carolina, and Bob Melvin of Fordham.

Rhody Track Team Ends Season In NY

The URI winter track team has ended its season by participating in the annual AAU and IC4A track meets held in Madison Square Garden in New York City.

Coach Tom Russell journeyed to New York with the mile relay team composed of Frank Nesbitt, Dick Lemieux, Tom Russillo, and Marshall Gerstenblatt for the AAU meet two weeks ago. The team stayed at the Mantattan Hotel Friday night.

The Ram team defeated Tufts, LaSalle, and Lafayette in running a 3:26 mile relay, the best so far this year. Nesbitt lead off with a 51 second quarter. Lemieux was second running a 51.4 followed by Russillo, 51.6 and anchored by Gerstenblatt running a 51 second quarter, the lowest of all four men. Rhody finished three yards ahead of second place finisher Tufts.

In the IC4A meet held last Friday night, Coach Russell entered his mile relay, Bill Massick in the 1000 yard run, Frank Nesbitt in the hurdles and Bob Lund in the two-mile.

Nesbitt, who earlier this year ran against Hayes Jones, managed to reach the quarter finals of the hurdles event before being knocked out of contention. Lund ran the two-mile in a slow 10:22 for a fifth place finish. Bill Massick ran the 1000 yard run but was eliminated in the trial heats.

Because of a wrenched knee, Massick took Lemieux's place in the relay. Gerstenblatt, Russillo and Nesbitt were the other three runners. The team finished fourth competing against such teams as Morgan State and Yale.
